ANSWERING THE CALL

January is finally over. A friend recently sent me an updated version of the old rhyme to remember the length of months it is: "30 days hath September, April, June, and November. All the rest have 31... Except January which has about 973." This resonated with me this year.

January 2022 has felt simultaneously like the longest and shortest month I have lived through. But as February starts and the rest of the year lies ahead, I find myself in a reflective mood about what months like January mean. Months when we are so busy we barely have time to stop and think. Months when our lives change. Months when we have a to do list as long as our arm. Months where we feel like we need a holiday just to get through them.

So often our lives seem to pass us by. Our days seem to be filled up before we even get out of bed. Walking the dogs, taking the children to school, going to work, making dinner, cleaning, checking in with friends and family, a few minutes to read or watch TV and then the whole thing starts again. Before we know it, the week has gone by and then the month and year.

And there is a reason for this. Our lives are busy. Even more so as we (hopefully) begin to come out of the pandemic. The pressure to be everything, to do everything is felt by most of us, even when we know that we cannot be or do everything. It can be hard to find time to stop, to think, to reflect, maybe even to pray. It can be difficult to carve out space in a day to be a Christian, to talk to God, to do the things that Jesus asks us to.

Into this busyness enters the readings we have for this Sunday. Both of which have, at their heart, the idea of being called to follow Jesus, to do God's work in the world. Two readings that demand our attention. That don't seem to care that we have a to-do list as long as our arms, or that we have that early meeting to go to. They tell us that God's call, that Jesus' call is demanding, is disruptive, is going to change our lives. That tell us, if we make the time, we will hear God's individual call to each one of us.

And to answer that call, we must dedicate ourselves, in our everyday lives to embracing the transformation that he wants; to living out our faith in the world; to loving our neighbour; to caring for God's wondrous creation.

So as January becomes February, and all those new year's resolutions seem like a distant, ill-advised memory. I pray that each of us finds some time this week to sit quietly, not to talk, but to try and listen for God in our own lives. And when we hear God, that we will answer the call to follow, wherever that path might lead us.

With every blessing,
Conor

Poetry Corner Scotland

by Alastair Reid

It was a day
peculiar to this piece of the planet,
when larks rose
on long thin strings of singing and the air shifted with the shimmer of actual angels.
Greenness entered the body. The grasses shivered with presences, and sunlight stayed
like a halo on hair and heather and hills.
Walking into town, I saw,
in a radiant raincoat,
the woman from the fish-shop.
'What a day it is!'
cried I, like a sunstruck madman.
And what did she have to say for it?
Her brow grew bleak,
her ancestors raged in their graves
as she spoke with their ancient misery:
'We'll pay for it,
we'll pay for it,
we'll pay for it!'

PRESBYTERY MISSION PLAN

Letter to all Ministers and Congregations in Fife Presbytery

Fife Presbytery Mission Plan Update – 31st January 2022

In the King James Version of the Bible, Proverbs 29:18 says: “Where there is no vision, the people perish....” In the RSV it is translated: “Where there is no prophecy...” while in the NIV it reads: “Where there is no revelation, the people cast off restraint.” By the 31st December 2022 we as a Presbytery are mandated to deliver an approved Presbytery Mission Plan that will reduce our number of ministries by approx. 25% and determine the future of our buildings. To do so, we all need to seek God’s guidance and to pray for revelation, prophecy and vision.

For several months we have been in consultation and now, given the time constraints, we need to begin to forge a vision for the future. There is an ancient proverb that says: “Blessed is he who plants trees under whose shade he will never sit.” It is understandable that some ministers, ministry staff and congregations are apprehensive about the future and what will happen to their church and ministry. Many have continued to work hard to maintain the church for generations to come. Our people are devoted, committed, hardworking and faithful but now we are asking too much from too few. As a new Presbytery we have come together but we don’t really know one another and what we can become. We have yet to discover that we can be greater than the sum of our parts. In some places congregations are dwindling; ageing and fearful about where the Kirk is going.

Elsewhere there are new shoots beginning to appear and new ways of being and doing church beginning to emerge and evolve. Many of our ministers are weary and Kirk Sessions are working hard to support them, sustain the faithful, our buildings and our Presbyterian heritage. We all want the Church of Scotland to be living and active in our community and to endure; despite the fact that our resources are being stretched and our infrastructure may no longer be as fit for purpose as it once was. Deep down we know we need to change, to make decisions and plan to future proof our church, so that future generations will sit in the shade of the tree that we have had the courage and the conviction to plant.

Our people are valued and we need to retain the faithful. We as a Presbytery have come together to support one another, to help one another as followers of Jesus and to be a force for good and a catalyst for change across our communities. We need to deliver on our promise to unburden ministers, elders and congregations and to free them up for mission, vitality and growth. We need to be prayerful and open to God speaking as we listen to him and seek his will as we continue to evolve, change and deliver the plan. Our aim is to enable ministers and congregations to fulfil their calling and to realise mission that is sustainable.

Lastly, in thanking you for all that you have done and continue to do for our church, we would ask you to pray for us, as together we seek to discern God’s will for Fife Presbytery’s Mission Plan.

With all good wishes and every blessing,
Jane, Neil and David
